

ABSTRACT

In a system for transmitting a plurality of data flows from a mobile station to a base station, combinations of capacities which are given from a radio network controller are optionally or quickly modified in the mobile station to be sent to the base station. The combinations of capacities are divided into a plurality of groups each of which is individually pointed by a sub pointer.